More and more poultry producers rely on Ziggity Systems, Inc. for poultry watering systems, as well as for expert advice on poultry watering issues.

The reason: Ziggity specializes in the watering needs of poultry producers. It manufactures only poultry watering systems and its sole focus is on watering issues. As other manufacturers continue to diversify into non-related areas, Ziggity is the only company that specializes in this critical poultry field.

Guided by a corporatewide operating principle, Ziggity has engineered its products to maximize bird, litter and system performance. According to Ziggity, a watering system should accomplish three functions – provide birds with all the water they need to grow; ensure that water remains clean and uncontaminated; and keep litter and pits dry in order to create a more healthy and productive environment.

Ziggity designed its drinkers for the way birds drink. This means more water goes into the bird with little or no water going into the litter or pits.

Beyond providing quality watering systems, Ziggity also advocates a highly disciplined approach to litter management that results in healthier birds and better return on investment.

Producers also need reliable information on issues such as biofilm. Biofilm in the water lines can drastically affect flock performance. Ziggity has committed itself to helping producers recognize and eradicate this problem. It also has designed its watering systems to make cleaning the lines easier and more effective.

Ziggity manufactures its systems with higher quality, longer lasting materials. Beyond that, Ziggity stands behind its product. Ziggity markets products only if, and when, it and its distributors can back those products with service.
